2023 JJSES ACCOMPLISHMENTS

The Juvenile Justice System Enhancement Strategy (JJSES) Leadership Team was proud to share our many accomplishments throughout 2023 in December's Pennsylvania Juvenile Justice newsletter. This month the Leadership Team highlights the JJSES Project during 2023 with an in-depth list of its year-end accomplishments. Note, peer mentorship is available to assist with JJSES implementation and/or help provide continuous quality improvement (CQI) of JJSES activities.

Stakeholder Engagement

- The Stakeholder Engagement Starter Kit, including Stakeholder Engagement Practices, Stakeholder Engagement Policy Outline, and two Stakeholder Engagement Policy Examples, was released and posted to the JCJC Strategic Plan dashboard.
- The Evidence-Based Practices (EBP) 101 training was revised and subsequently continues to be adapted for use with various stakeholders and presentation formats by mid-2024.
- The Stage 1 Committee continued its efforts with stakeholder engagement by growing its membership to include representatives from the Pennsylvania Council of Chief Juvenile Probation Officers' (PCCJPO) Community Engagement and Family Engagement Committees.
- A proposal focused on educational stability was submitted to and approved by the Pennsylvania Council of Children, Youth & Family Services for presentation at their 2024 Annual Conference.

Family Engagement

- The committee was renamed from "Family Involvement" to "Family Engagement." Family Involvement suggests families participate in activities predetermined for them whereas Family Engagement recognizes that families should be part of the decision-making process.
- The committee continued its efforts to grow its membership to include members with lived experience within the juvenile justice system.

MYTH

FACT

The Juvenile Court Judges' Commission continues its monthly series, "Myth vs. Fact," which addresses common misconceptions of the Pennsylvania juvenile justice system. Using a combination of the Pennsylvania Juvenile Case Management System data and scholarly research conducted by the field more broadly, this series will provide data-driven facts on all topics juvenile justice.

This month's installment addresses a circulated myth surrounding out-of-home residential placement use in the Commonwealth. Future iterations of this series will address myths surrounding topics like the use of diversion and graduated responses, as well as more general principles of evidenced-based best practice.

MYTH

Many youth, some as young as 10 years old, are sent to out-of-home residential placement for minor infractions, including failure to pay fines.

FACT

Most youth placed in out-of-home residential facilities were there for felony and against-person offenses. No youth whose most serious charge was non-payment of fines received a disposition to out-of-home residential placement in 2022.

The following is an overview of all written allegations received during 2022:

- Approximately 15% (n = 2,873) of written allegations received during 2022 had non-payment of fines as the most serious charge. The most common dispositions received for these non-payment of fines cases were payment plan for fines/costs to be paid (43%) and informal adjustment (27%). Only 0.4% of non-payment allegations were adjudicated delinquent, and no youth under the age of 13 were adjudicated delinquent for non-payment allegations. Finally, no youth whose most serious charge was non-payment of fines was disposed to out-of-home residential placement.
- Approximately 31% of written allegations received during 2022 had a felony offense as the most serious charge. Approximately 12% of these felony offenses resulted in a placement disposition.
- Approximately 54% of written allegations received during 2022 had a misdemeanor offense as the most serious charge. Only 3% of these misdemeanor offenses resulted in a placement disposition.

Additionally, all dispositions to out-of-home residential placement (n = 1,352) during 2022 were examined.

- Placement dispositions accounted for just 5% of all dispositions in 2022.
- Approximately 63% of placements were for felony and against-person offenses.¹
- The most common offenses among dispositions to placement were theft-related offenses (14%), fire-arm-related offenses (13%), and simple assault (11%).
 - Approximately 7% (n = 97) of dispositions to placement were for youth ages 10-13 at the time of disposition. Among this age group, the most common offenses were theft-related offenses (17%) and indecent assault (11%).

¹An additional 21% (n = 287) of placement dispositions were referred as alleged felony offenses but were adjudicated as misdemeanors.

GLADE RUN AFTERSCHOOL ENRICHMENT PROGRAM

Glade Run Lutheran Services operates an Afterschool Enrichment Program for youth involved with Butler Juvenile Court Services and/or Children and Youth Services at the Grace Community Wellness Center in Butler. The program was designed in collaboration and support with Butler County Juvenile Court Services to provide structure and positive prosocial activities for adolescents with challenging households and/or minimal parental supervision. The program operates from immediately after school until 6:30 p.m. Research indicates that crimes among youth peak between the hours of 3:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. This unsupervised and unstructured time after school is the highest contributor to youth crime in the United States.

The afterschool program starts with participants getting a bite to eat followed by a homework check. Other activities that occur on an individual basis are community service opportunities, psychoeducation groups, recreation activities, job searches, and the evidence-based interactive journaling opportunity called Forward Thinking®. Many times, incentives are offered to the youth who are actively participating and working towards change. Glade Run staff are in constant communication with the youth's family and provide regular progress reports back to the juvenile probation officer or caseworker. Glade Run will also provide transportation if needed and has provided support to families/youth around basic needs. The afterschool program extends its programming into the summer with the hours changing from 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m.

Many times, youth enter the Afterschool Enrichment Program with resistance and skepticism. The Glade Run staff has found that over time they are able to engage these youth and help them imagine a future that they have not previously considered. After over a year of operating the program, some youth now come back to the program, check in, and report positive changes that they are making in their lives. The Glade Run Afterschool Program will continue to keep our lights on, stay fully staffed, and fully committed to the youth of Butler County who need a safe and welcoming place to decide if they want their lives to take a different path.

"Juvenile Court Services is happy to have partnered with Glade Run Lutheran Services. Their hard work and dedication towards the Afterschool Program has made a positive impact on the youth we refer to them. We are pleased with the results and are confident there will be continued success in the future," stated Sue Stover, Deputy Director, Butler County Juvenile Court Services.

PENNSYLVANIA COMPLEX CASE NEEDS ASSESSMENT

Submitted by Abigail Wilson, Director, PCCYFS Child Welfare, Juvenile Justice, and Education Services

The Pennsylvania Department of Human Services commissioned the Autism Services, Education, Resources, & Training Collaborative (ASERT) to conduct a needs assessment of Pennsylvania's children, youth, and young adults with complex needs, and the systems supporting them. Information was gathered through focus groups and surveys of children, youth, young adults, their families, and providers.

While youth ages 0-21 with complex needs are a diverse group, some of the most common characteristics of these individuals include:

- complex trauma such as abuse, neglect, and developmental and institutional trauma
- multiple and complex diagnoses across the developmental, physical, and mental health domains
- potential diagnostic overshadowing due to an intellectual disability and/or autism diagnosis
- complex communication needs
- inconsistent presentation of behaviors and symptoms across settings
- disrupted education

While Pennsylvania has a foundation of services for young people, these services have primarily been developed for the general population. Fewer supports and services are in place for individuals with complex needs. These youth are significantly more likely to have experienced institutionalized care; poverty; co-occurring mental health needs; mental, behavioral, or developmental disorders; anxiety or depression; or neglect or abuse.

As a result of the qualitative data collected for the report, collaborators recognized five emerging themes identifying problems in reaching at-risk youth with necessary supports and services:

Communication

Participants noted the lack of communication and coordination across service systems. Improving the quality of information on children and youth, e.g., social histories, and the coordination of these across systems would improve services to this population. Systems and families often disagree on the services a child needs. Additionally, families may feel disengaged from planning processes and may feel that they do not have a voice in their child's treatment plan.

Availability of Services and Programs

Parents note one of the most significant barriers to obtaining services for their children is the dearth of services and programs in their geographic location. Frequent insurance denials delay services, as do inconveniences such as long waiting times when individuals are "too acute" for care. Residential programs and inpatient treatment become the default when other options are unavailable. Hospital representatives noted an increase in emergency department visits from children, youth, and young adults and almost all (91%) attributed these visits to a lack of resources for children with complex needs.

Awareness and Navigation of Resources

Almost half of families surveyed reported difficulties in navigating the help systems in place. Even more families indicated difficulties understanding the services and programs available to their child. Many families indicated a lack of awareness of how these programs and services benefit their child, cross-system planning, and pooling of resources. The families' lack of knowledge extended to navigating complex insurance processes.

Staffing

Participants noted areas of concern such as barriers with staffing, citing provider availability and qualifications, burnout, recruitment and retention problems, training, and motivation. Shortages in staffing exacerbate problems with service availability. Additional problems included low wages, intense job duties, and lack of career advancement.

Trauma-Informed Supports

Participants noted the importance of specific, individual trauma history in planning treatment, as well as an increase in cases of anxiety, depression, and trauma history. Respondents noted that staff should receive more trauma-informed training, as well as the identifying the importance of periodically evaluating systems that serve children, youth, and young adults with complex needs, and their families.

In the future, this report may be used to influence programs and systems. The report concludes with an Youth-with-Complex-Needs-A-Blueprint-Workgroup-Report.pdf \(pa.gov\). for ensuring that Pennsylvania's youth with complex needs have access to appropriate supports and services in a timely manner.

JUVENILE DIVERSION SURVEY

The Pennsylvania Commission on Crime and Delinquency (PCCD) requests your assistance to complete, and further disseminate, a survey that will assist the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Committee (JJJPC) and PCCD with gathering relevant information related to current resources and gaps in local diversion policy, practices, and programming. The utilization of diversion policies, practices, and programs, in appropriate cases, can reduce the impact of formal involvement with the juvenile justice system for youth who commit minor offenses, while ensuring balanced and restorative justice.

PCCD recognizes the importance of capturing feedback from our stakeholders. Please complete the survey below and feel free to forward the survey link to any stakeholder you deem appropriate. This survey should take no longer than 10 minutes to complete. Your participation is extremely important as results from the survey will help shape effective strategies and drive positive change in our approach to diversion. The information collected through this survey may also be used to make future funding and policy recommendations to the JJJPC.

PENNSYLVANIA TEAM PARTICIPATES IN A CHILDREN’S BEHAVIORAL HEALTH POLICY LAB

The American Public Human Services Association, Annie E. Casey Foundation®, Casey Family Programs (CFP), Child Welfare League of America (CWLA), Health Management Associates (HMA), National Association of Medicaid Directors, and National Association of State Mental Health Program Directors partnered to build out an exciting opportunity for selected states to participate in a Children’s Behavioral Health Policy Lab on February 7-9, 2024. Eighteen states submitted application materials for this convening. Pennsylvania was one of nine states, along with Georgia, Kansas, Kentucky, Maryland, Missouri, Texas, Utah, and Wisconsin, invited to the event via the competitive selection process. The Pennsylvania Team was led by Jonathan McVey, Special Assistant to the Secretary, Department of Human Services, and included representatives from the Juvenile Court Judges’ Commission; Bureau of Children’s Behavioral Health Services, Office of Mental Health and Substance Abuse Services; Bureau of Policy, Analysis and Planning, Office of Medical Assistance Programs; Bureau of Special Education, Department of Education; Bureau of Supports for Autism and Special Populations, Office of Developmental Programs; and Office of Children, Youth and Families.

The intent of the three-day convening was to help create a dialogue among state agencies and stakeholders working to improve outcomes for children and youth with complex behavioral health needs and their families, and to build a state-specific actionable roadmap. The convening opened with a plenary panel comprised of families and youth with lived experiences. Next, a discussion commenced with an exploration of the background and the imperative driving this initiative, shedding light on the state selection process, and highlighting key aspects of the proposal, including each team’s partners contributing to different portions of the roadmap. Finally, three sessions were facilitated around a specific topic to improve outcomes for children and youth. Each session—governance, financing, and service arrays—opened with a spark session to energize and focus each team in preparation for delving into that particular topic and closed with reflections by each state team.

The Pennsylvania team had a distinct advantage over the other eight state teams as the Blueprint Workgroup for Youth with Complex Needs recently completed their report, Improving the Lives of Children, Youth, and Young Adults with Complex Need and Their Families. Therefore, the Pennsylvania team worked with their assigned CFP, CWLA, and HMA facilitators to shift the team’s focus at the convening from building an actionable roadmap to identifying the initial steps needed to implement the already built blueprint report. The blueprint report is available at Youth-with-Complex-Needs-A-Blueprint-Workgroup-Report.pdf \(pa.gov\).

SPEP™ 2024: Consistency in Classification

Pennsylvania’s Standardized Program Evaluation Protocol (SPEP) Project will focus on refining and aligning the service classification process in 2024. Appropriately classifying services is at the foundation for the SPEP assessment. It sets the stage for all therapeutic services that are engaged in the SPEP process. Additionally, it establishes the appropriate Amount of Service targets for a given service.

The service identification and classification process was reviewed with all participants at the February 6th SPEP Learning Community. This booster session was intended to align all relevant stakeholders with the process and the resources available to successfully classify services in the field. This session was designed to precede the regional in-person Learning Community session(s) scheduled for May 23rd, where attendees will participate in a hands-on training experience and put the service classification process and tools into action. The in-person session(s) will include an inter-rater reliability segment, as well as the opportunity for the eastern and western parts of the state to ensure consistency in their responses.

Consistent service classification strategies become even more important as the SPEP Project evolves. The SPEP Activity Map provides a visual representation of services across the state that are engaged with SPEP. The addition of the “It’s Classified” package expands opportunities for more services to be classified and added to the map and allows juvenile probation officers to have a greater repertoire of interventions to which they can refer youth.

If you have any questions about SPEP, please contact Kris Glunt, SPEP Project Manager, at ktg10@psu.edu.

TECHNOLOGY CORNER

The Juvenile Court Judges' Commission is utilizing responsive web design for its Pennsylvania Juvenile Case Management System (PaJCMS) rewrite.

Responsive web design is a web development approach that creates dynamic changes to the appearance of a website depending on the screen size and orientation of the device being used to view it. This feature helps optimize the user experience and performance of the website no matter what device you may choose to use (desktop, laptop, mobile, tablet, etc.). To the left are two examples showing how responsive web design creates changes to the appearance of the website to account for the specific device being used. The image to the far left shows what the new PaJCMS may look like if viewed on a mobile device, while the image below it shows what the new PaJCMS may look like if viewed on a desktop or laptop.

NCSC FACILITATES JUVENILE JUSTICE WORKSHOPS IN VIETNAM

January 31, 2024 -- Earlier this month, NCSC facilitated four juvenile justice workshops in Vietnam titled International Experience in Handling Juvenile Offenders.

A team of four juvenile justice practitioners, judges, and court officers from Pennsylvania and Arizona traveled to Ho Chi Minh City, Da Nang, Ha Long, and Hanoi to deliver presentations to representatives from Vietnam's Supreme People's Court, National Assembly, and judges from across the country.

NCSC's International Programs Division (IPD) was key in bringing together the team of juvenile justice experts. "Their identification was done in consultation with colleagues in domestic divisions who work on juvenile justice reform in the U.S.," said Senior Program Manager Violaine Autheman. Autheman noted that the visit, organized through and funded by the U.S. Department of State, Bureau of International Narcotics and Law Enforcement, offers an example of internal collaboration between international and domestic divisions, leveraging NCSC's domestic work with state courts.

During the workshops, presenters discussed best practices in juvenile justice developed through decades of work in U.S. state courts, the importance of language and terminology in juvenile justice legislation and court proceedings, and the necessity of separate procedures for juveniles and adults.

Presenters also offered feedback on Vietnam's new draft juvenile justice law. Vietnam is currently experiencing a rise in juvenile delinquency. Like juveniles in the U.S., young people in Vietnam may feel scared and vulnerable and experience negative impacts due to their involvement in the justice system.

The division recently organized workshops for Vietnamese court officers and hosted Vietnamese delegations in the U.S. to discuss juvenile justice systems, diversion programs, legislation, virtual hearings, plea bargaining, and court administration.

Since its founding more than 30 years ago, the international division has worked in over 70 countries to strengthen institutional accountability and responsiveness and expand access to justice by offering technical assistance and training to improve justice systems and services. NCSC is currently working in more than 30 countries.

FAMILY ENGAGEMENT EVENT

The Family Involvement Committee is proud to present a workshop designed to introduce Juvenile Probation Officers to the foundational principles of FAMILY ENGAGEMENT. Participants will be provided strategies to effectively engage families in all stages of supervision and through all JJSES activities from intake to case closure. This workshop will also provide guidance on effectively introducing and utilizing resources to include A Family Guide to Pennsylvania's Juvenile Justice System and the interactive Parenting Workbooks.

The workshop will conclude with a panel comprised of justice-involved family members, youth, and family advocates, who will share their unique perspectives and experiences engaging with the Juvenile Justice System. Participants will hear firsthand from family members with lived experience, who will provide honest insight on their involvement, reactions, struggles, and successes navigating our juvenile justice system.

This workshop is ideal for all Juvenile Probation Officers, Supervisors, and those individuals a department may wish to identify as a Family Engagement Coach. Coaches can be helpful with a department's effort to ensure families have the opportunity to engage in all aspects of supervision and will leave this workshop with examples to share with their departments.
